DETAILED RESEARCH CONSENT

You are being invited to take part in a research program. A person who takes part in a research study is called a program participant.

In this consent form “you” generally refers to the program participant. If you are being asked as the legally authorized representative, parent, or guardian to permit the participant to take part in the program, “you” in the rest of this form generally means the program participant.

What should I know about this program?

- Someone will explain this program to you.
- This form sums up that explanation.
- Taking part in this program is voluntary. Whether you take part is up to you.
- You can choose not to take part. There will be no penalty or loss of benefits to which you are otherwise entitled.
- You can agree to take part and later change your mind. There will be no penalty or loss of benefits to which you are otherwise entitled.
- If you don’t understand, ask questions.
- Ask all of the questions you want before you decide.

What is the purpose of this program?

The purpose of this program is to provide the research labs within the Psychology and Neuroscience Department of Temple University with a way to recruit participants who have participated in past studies for current studies that are open to participation.

How long will I be in this program?

Your taking part in this program will continue until you choose to no longer be contacted for any future studies. Since many of the research labs at Temple University enroll people of all age ranges, there will generally be no reason to remove you from the program unless you so choose.

What happens to me if I agree to take part in this program?

If you choose to take part in this program, we will aggregate your contact information and basic demographics into the HIPAA compliant database. Researchers will then be able to contact you on behalf of their lab to make you aware of current study opportunities. The following general information will be included in the database:

- Full Legal Name
- Phone Number
- Email Address
- Residential Address
- Race and Ethnicity
- Age
- Gender

- Height and Weight
- Sex Assigned at Birth
- Psychiatric Diagnoses
- Currently Prescribed Medications

What are my responsibilities if I take part in this research?

If you take part in this program, you will be responsible to:

- Respond to messages about studies that may interest you
- Notify researchers of your current study enrollment status
- Notify researchers if you choose to opt out of the program

Could being in this research hurt me?

There is no risk of physical harm or discomfort if you choose to participate in this program. However, though personal information is kept in a HIPPA compliant database, there is always potential risk for a breach of confidentiality.

Will it cost me money to take part in this research?

Choosing to enroll in this program has no related financial costs.

Will being in this research benefit me?

We cannot promise any benefits to you or others from your taking part in this program. However, possible benefits to you include up-to-date information on current studies in the department of Psychology and Neuroscience at Temple University.

What happens to the information collected for this research?

Your private information may be shared with individuals and organizations that conduct or watch over this program, including:

- Government agencies, such as the Food and Drug Administration or the Department of Health and Human Services
- The Institutional Review Board (IRB) that reviewed this research
- Temple University
- Temple University Health System and its affiliates

We protect your information from disclosure to others to the extent required by law. We cannot promise complete secrecy.

Who can answer my questions about this research?

If you have questions, concerns, or complaints, or think this program has hurt you or made you sick, talk to the research team at the phone number listed above on the first page.

This research is being overseen by an Institutional Review Board (“IRB”). An IRB is a group of people who perform independent review of research studies. You may talk to them at (215) 707-3390 or irb@temple.edu if:

- You have questions, concerns, or complaints that are not being answered by the research team.
- You are not getting answers from the research team.
- You cannot reach the research team.
- You want to talk to someone else about the research.
- You have questions about your rights as a research subject.

Can I be removed from this research without my approval?

The person in charge of this research can remove you from this research without your approval. Possible reasons for removal include:

- It is in your best interest
- You have a side effect that requires stopping participation in the program
- You become pregnant
- The program is canceled by the sponsor
- You are unable to keep your scheduled appointments

We will tell you about any new information that may affect your health, welfare, or choice to stay in this program.

What happens if I agree to be in this program, but I change my mind later?

If you decide to leave this research, contact the research team so that the investigator can remove your personal information from the HIPAA compliant database.

Data collected at the point of your withdrawal will be deleted from the HIPAA compliant database, and researchers will no longer be able to contact you. You are free to express the reason for your withdrawal with the study coordinators or research personnel you are in contact with at that point in time.
